North America Intellectual Property Corporation conducts PVIGO e-Services (hereinafter referred to as the “PVIGO website”)

The PVIGO website attaches great importance to your personal information and privacy, and fully complies with the “Computer-Processed Personal Data Protection Law” of the Republic of China (Taiwan) and this Privacy Policy. Unless in a manner fully compliant with the “Computer-Processed Personal Data Protection Law” and this Private Policy, the PVIGO website will not collect or utilize your personal information.

1. PVIGO website servers automatically log information about the pages you have browsed, your IP address and Internet domain name for the purpose of evaluating improvements in content and systems administration. The information collected is used only by site administrators to perform statistical analyses and is not used in coordination with any personally identifiable data analyses.
2. When you create a PVIGO Member account or adjust your personal settings, the PVIGO website places a “cookie” (a uniquely identifiable text file) onto your computer. The cookie does not contain sufficient information to divulge your personal identity and only stores information used in customizing your homepage settings and similar data. PVIGO website servers can only access the cookies they have stored on your computer and cannot access cookies stored by other websites. You may choose not to accept PVIGO website cookies by adjusting your web browser’s security settings. However you will not be able to personalize your PVIGO homepage, access the PVIGO Member Center or enjoy other related services.
3. Typically, visitors to the PVIGO website need neither declare their identities nor disclose any personal information. Upon registering as a PVIGO Member or participating in a PVIGO website event, we may ask you to supply personal information such as gender, occupation and e-mail address, so that we may provide you with more accurate and relevant information on PVIGO website services. The PVIGO website will never sell or disclose this information to third parties or non-affiliated organizations without your permission, except in limited cases where required to do so by law. The PVIGO website also strictly prohibits unauthorized use of your information by PVIGO employees.
4. Your email address is used solely for the purposes of PVIGO website-user communication and interaction. Although the PVIGO website makes every effort to protect your email, you accept the risk that this information, through illegal means or circumstances beyond the control of the PVIGO website, may be made publicly available or obtained by others. The PVIGO website is neither responsible for the behavior of these persons nor liable for any damages arising from their actions. Please consider carefully which information you choose to divulge.

5. This Privacy Policy takes immediate effect. However, due to social and legal changes as well as technological advances, the PVIGO website reserves the right to modify this Privacy Policy at any time to ensure your privacy. The PVIGO website will make every effort to notify you of significant changes as quickly as possible. Should you have any comments regarding this Privacy Policy, you are welcome to share your thoughts using the “Contact Us” function available on the PVIGO website.
